A bright little boy residing on the south side of town persistently refused to allow himself made ready for the Children's day entertainment, stoutly insisting that it was not Sunday, cause Bate Drummond never came over from Odessa that day he said.
The horse that Mr. Walter Myers was riding in pursuit of a fleeing cow last Sunday morning stepped in a hole and fell to the ground, throwing Myers off in such a manner that the animal rolled over him, breaking his shoulder blade, bruising the side of his face and inflicting several other minor injuries. At last accounts he was doing well.

W. P. Leinback, our genial and efficient tonsorial artist, Monday morning employed Pat Kerdolf, colored, a good barber, to assist him in the shop, as Frank alleges solely to meet the demands of his increasing business, but many of the boys about town declare that it was the awful care and expense incident to properly rearing his rapidly multiplying family of canary birds that forced him to get help.
The Children's Day programme rendered by members of the Sunday school at the M. E. church last Sunday evening was a pronounced success in all particulars and reflected great credit upon the little ones participating and honor and praise for Mesdames H. E. Corse, J. A. Mann and Henry Carter, who with the assistance of many others, managed the affair. Rev. E. Y. Glau delivered an appropriate address. The building would not accommodate all in attendance, many of whom crowded the doors and windows.
